Genre: Animation, Family, Comedy, Fantasy, Adventure, Music Companies: United States of America Release: 2020-03-12 Duration: 94 min. Quality: HD

More of a one-man massacre than ever before (but just raggedy enough to keep things "real"), Mr. Wick fights in a punishingly brutal style that builds on what director Chad Stahelski invented for the character in the previous films. This is a character who appears to know every single language under the sun, but violence is the most expressive part of his vocabulary (Reeves speaks maybe 100 words in the entire movie). Chinese wushu, Japanese judo, Southeast Asian silat, American Glock... Wick is fluent in them all.

But while Stahelski and his team have obviously put a great deal of thought into every frame of fisticuffs, "Parabellum" is so relentless that it often devolves into a numbing flurry of shoulder flips and headshots. If "Chapter 2" bordered on high art for how cleverly it weaved tactical shootouts into public locations (and made every fight operate like an organic bit of world-building), "Chapter 3" is more out in the open. A sneaky little skirmish in Grand Central Station doesn't live up to Stahelski's creative potential, even if it's amazing they pulled off the scene at all.

Elsewhere, a motorcycle chase along an empty Manhattan bridge is too rushed and blurry to deliver the "Fury Road" ferocity it teases, and the climactic brawl—which makes great use of some familiar faces, and hinges on a funny dynamic of mutual respect—is overwhelmed by a set that looks like a high-end watch commercial, and feels like a watered-down retread of the house of mirrors sequence from the end of the previous movie.

Driven by a profound respect for the expressive power of beating someone to death, and empowered by their 54-year-old star's remarkable skill and commitment, Stahelski and the other poets of percussive carnage that work at his 87Eleven Productions are still (a severed) head and shoulders above the rest of Hollywood's stunt community. But they can do more with this character, even if it means slowing things down and widening them out.

"Wonder Woman 1984"

To that end, it's telling that the most exciting brawl in "Parabellum" (with the possible exception of a knife fight in a Chinatown antiques store) maintains a more expansive vision, as Mr. Wick fights alongside Halle Berry and some four-legged sidekicks. Traveling to Casablanca for reasons that are never adequately explained, Mr. Wick meets up with an assassin named Sofia who owns a pair of well-trained Malinois dogs; like every other supporting character in this movie, there's mixed blood between them, and she owes him something for some reason.

There are coins and seals and lots of jibber jabber about High Table manners and then "Game of Thrones" star Jerome Flynn shows up as a Bronn-like business type who's a bit too greedy for his own good (it's hard to tell what accent Flynn is doing here, but he's most definitely doing it). When the bullets fly, Sofia's very good boys lend a valuable assist, and Stahelski has to open things up in order to frame the dogs as they chew on fresh corpses. The sequence is very "John Wick" and horribly terrific in a hand-over-your-mouth kind of way; it does more than any of the tossed-off business with the Bowery King (Laurence Fishburn) or the Continental Hotel owner (Ian McShane) to whet our appetites for another adventure. Anjelica Huston is also somewhat wasted as the matriarch of a Harlem ballet academy with ties to Wick's past, but her scenes are so immaculately shot that you're willing to let it slide.

In a film that plays fast and loose with NYC geography, all is forgiven by turning 175th street's United Palace into the "Tarkovsky Theater," where people are trained to be killers in between performances of "Swan Lake."

The film's world-building works best in small doses. A meeting in the middle of the desert is a total dead end, whereas all sorts of fun details can be inferred from Stahelski's frequent cutaways to the High Table nerve center, where dozens of tattooed and lip-glossed workers monitor Wick's bounty with an old-fashioned switchboard (imagine a SuicideGirls reboot of "Mad Men" and you'll have the right idea). Non-binary "Billions" star Asia Kate Dillon plays a stiff and slinky High Table adjudicator who's covered in Thierry Mugler couture; part referee and part femme fatale, their performance speaks to an underworld that's sustained by a mutual respect for all people so long as they don't shoot the wrong target.

While this franchise is starting to feel a bit long in the tooth, such details suggest that screenwriter Derek Kolstad (here sharing credit with three other scribes) can still mine this world for plenty of new life, so long as future installments find a way to deepen the John Wick mythos instead of just stretching it out. With the significant exception of "Mission: Impossible," this is easily the best action franchise Hollywood has going these days, and it would be great for it to keep going with renewed focus.

The fact that Keanu Reeves is nearing 60 won't matter to his fans. For one thing, the man is seemingly ageless. For another, retirement no longer seems like a realistic option for a guy who still gets recognized everywhere he goes. It doesn't matter if you're a Hollywood star or a $14 million bounty—fame can be a difficult thing to shake. It's a work-or-die world, and being forgotten is neither on the table nor under it.
